"Some time ago a colored man applied for work at a building operation and was taken up. The first duty assigned him was carrying planks from one corner to another. The planks weighed a whole lot more than a heavy conscience, and as the colored man wearily trudged along, he became thoughtful.

"Look yeah, boss," he remarked, finally, going over to the foreman, "did I tell you what mah name was when I started in to work?"

"Why, yes," answered the foreman, wondering, "You said it was Thompson."

"Dat's jes' what I did, boss. Dat's jes' what I did!" was the smiling rejoinder of the colored party. "But I was afraid dat yo' done gone made a mistake an' ank it was Samson."

WHY.

"And you wouldn't begin a journey on Friday?"

"I can't understand how you can have faith in such silly superstition. No superstition about it. Saturday's my pay day."—Minneapolis Journal.

DISCHARGED FEDERAL PRISONER WOULD GET SUIT OF CLOTHES AND V

Two items, namely a suit of clothes and five dollars, are causing Acting United States Marshal Harry Holt no little perplexity.

Simon Popov, alias Charles William Boyd, who has been attending to janitorial duties when not wringing Russian music out of a guitar—in the federal building during the last nine months and three weeks, in lieu of street work and other occupations doled out by High Sheriff Jarrett, is at the bottom of the whole thing.

Simon, alias Charles, yesterday was released from penal servitude. Immediately he consulted the law library in Judge Clements' office and later the jurist himself. Then he went down to see Marshal Holt.

"According to the statutes, I've got a suit of clothes and five dollars coming to me," he informed the official. Holt thought the matter over. That Simon, alias Charles, was a discharged federal prisoner, was true enough. He certainly was entitled to what he asked for, it appeared.

"This is the first time a demand of this nature has been made since I have been in office, nine years," said Holt afterward. "Under the statute, he is entitled to what he asks for, as far as I know."

Marshal Holt found that he has no vouchers on hand for the purpose of accounting for such items as a suit of clothes and five dollars. He has written to Washington for the vouchers—and for authority to act.

SAFEST WAY.

Jack—Darling, how would you advise me to ask your father for your hand?

Betty—By telephone.—Boston Transcript.
